Summary: Ten things Martha might have said to young Clark.

I was thinking about “Mommisms” – those things that it seems as though every mother says. Things like, “If everyone else jumped off a cliff, would you do so, too?” Or, “I’m cold. You put on a sweater.” Or, “Don’t cross your eyes or your face will freeze that way.” Well, the way I figure it, given the special nature of her little boy, Martha’s “Mommisms” would probably have been a little different than most. So without further ado and with tongue very much in cheek ...

- 10) You don’t need to eat your spinach or drink your milk. You have already grown quite big and strong enough as it is.
- 9) Don’t run with those scissors – you might trip and damage them.
- 8) Always wear a clean pair of underwear over your pants.
- 7) This will hurt me a lot more than it hurts you.
- 6) Clark Jerome Kent, I’m going to give you until the count of one ...
- 5) When it comes to sports, never give it your all!
- 4) Don’t you DARE look through me like that, young man!
- 3) What? You can lift cars, but you can’t pick your jacket up off the floor and put it on a hanger?!?
- 2) You have to get up now. The school bus will be here in half a minute, and you still need to get changed and eat breakfast.
- 1) Just for that, young man, you are grounded. No flying for a month!
